COSHH research

It is important to understand how health and safety legislation affects you in your work and in the day-to-day running of the salon.

You may already have some knowledge of the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations (COSHH) 2003 for general hairdressing services. You will need to understand your specific responsibilities under the COSHH Regulations in relation to colouring services.

Using the Internet, trade magazines or books, research the following information. Write your findings in the spaces provided below.

- 1 How should you dispose of any unused colouring products?

- 2 Where should colouring products be mixed?

- 3 How do you correctly store colouring products?

- 4 What should be available in the salon in the event of colouring products getting into the client's eyes? How would you deal with this situation?
